- Are you prepared to quickly recover and resume organizational functions in the event of an unexpected disruption to normal operations?

The news is surrounding us. Concerns about our home and work environments abound. Businesses are opening, governments are opening, and many clients have no way to interact except through technology. This use of technology may not always be ideal. ThreeR Consulting (ThreeR) however, believes with proper technological planning and staff training, most organizations can function on a limited or almost fully functional basis during a crisis.

Preparing for contingencies not only reduces the severity of the impact on your organization, it also positions you to restore operations swiftly and efficiently. A Reemergence/ Redesign/ Resiliency Plan (RRR Plan), as currently defined, is the process of developing advanced arrangements and procedures to enable an organization to respond to an event so that critical functions continue with limited interruption or essential change in order to operate, whenever it is safe.

An effective RRR Plan addresses the protection and restoration of all staff, office and technology operations and includes these key dimensions:

- Procedures and Techniques intended to minimize the severity of the effects of an unpreventable event. It also provides a timely response to an emergency and an effective and timely recovery
- Team Structure and responsibilities for resumption actions specific to every major operational or functional area
- Critical Functions, the hardware and software supporting each function and the impact that the disruption or loss of the function could have on the overall operations
- Actions Necessary to safeguard and restore core operational functions within the maximum acceptable recovery period. This is dependent upon their critical impact in law and on operations
- Procedures pre-determined procedures for obtaining alternative office space, equipment and supplies
- Sample Emergency Exercises to test the effectiveness of the RRRP and its ability to provide necessary actions to be deployed in the event of a disruption to business operations

ThreeR is a company dedicated to improving the performance of its clients. One of our services is to provide methods and tools to prepare you for the unexpected and to help you analyze the potential impacts of disaster and its underlying risks. Our staff of senior level consultants has the experience and expertise to identify the foundations upon which a sound Reemergence/ Redesign/ Resiliency Plan must be built. We help your organization construct, test, and audit plans the RRR Plan must have to ensure that it meets your unique requirements.

The core principle of our approach is the recognition that you need a RRRP that prepares your organization to be up and running as soon as possible in the event of a disaster or disabling event.
